ADMINISTRATION

The inhabitants of the lower hall of Main constitute the foundation for our years at George School. Whether indirectly through school policy or directly through personal contact, the Administration guide us from the day of our application until the moment of our graduation. Coordinating the bases for all aspects of our education and development, they help us plan our programs, counsel us in our problems, and try to integrate their ideas and ours into a sound and effective school philosophy. Through their sincere interest in us and their recognition of our growth, the Administration allow us both the freedom and the challenge of personal responsibility. Thus, as they have guided us in our development here at George School, they continue to lead us into the planning of our futures.

"Surely SOMEONE must know!"

"This is the easy way out."

Mathematics takes us into the region of absolute necessity, to which not only the actual world, but every possible world must conform.

Bertrand Russell

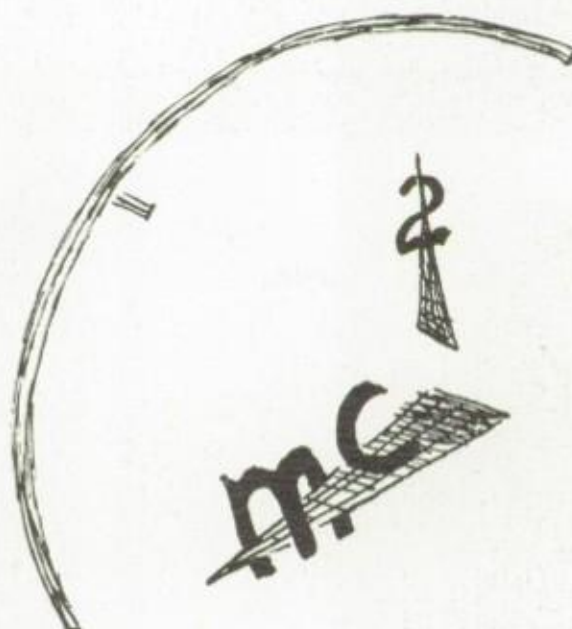

"The Study of Mathematics"

Each George School student may claim the distinct title of 215-9683811-18940-4015-7455.* We wonder whether such nomenclature will ever become intelligible, but through the study of mathematics we gain some skill with and understanding of numbers. After groping our way through sets and spheres, triangles and trig, lines and logs, calculus and coordinates, we emerge, some a bit confused, others enlightened and inspired. But long after "rain in Peoria" and "Quimby's birthday" and the meaning of logs have fallen from our memories, the invaluable facility in logical thinking developed through our math courses will continue to guide our thoughts, actions, and expression.

"You can bet your boots . . ."

SCIENCE

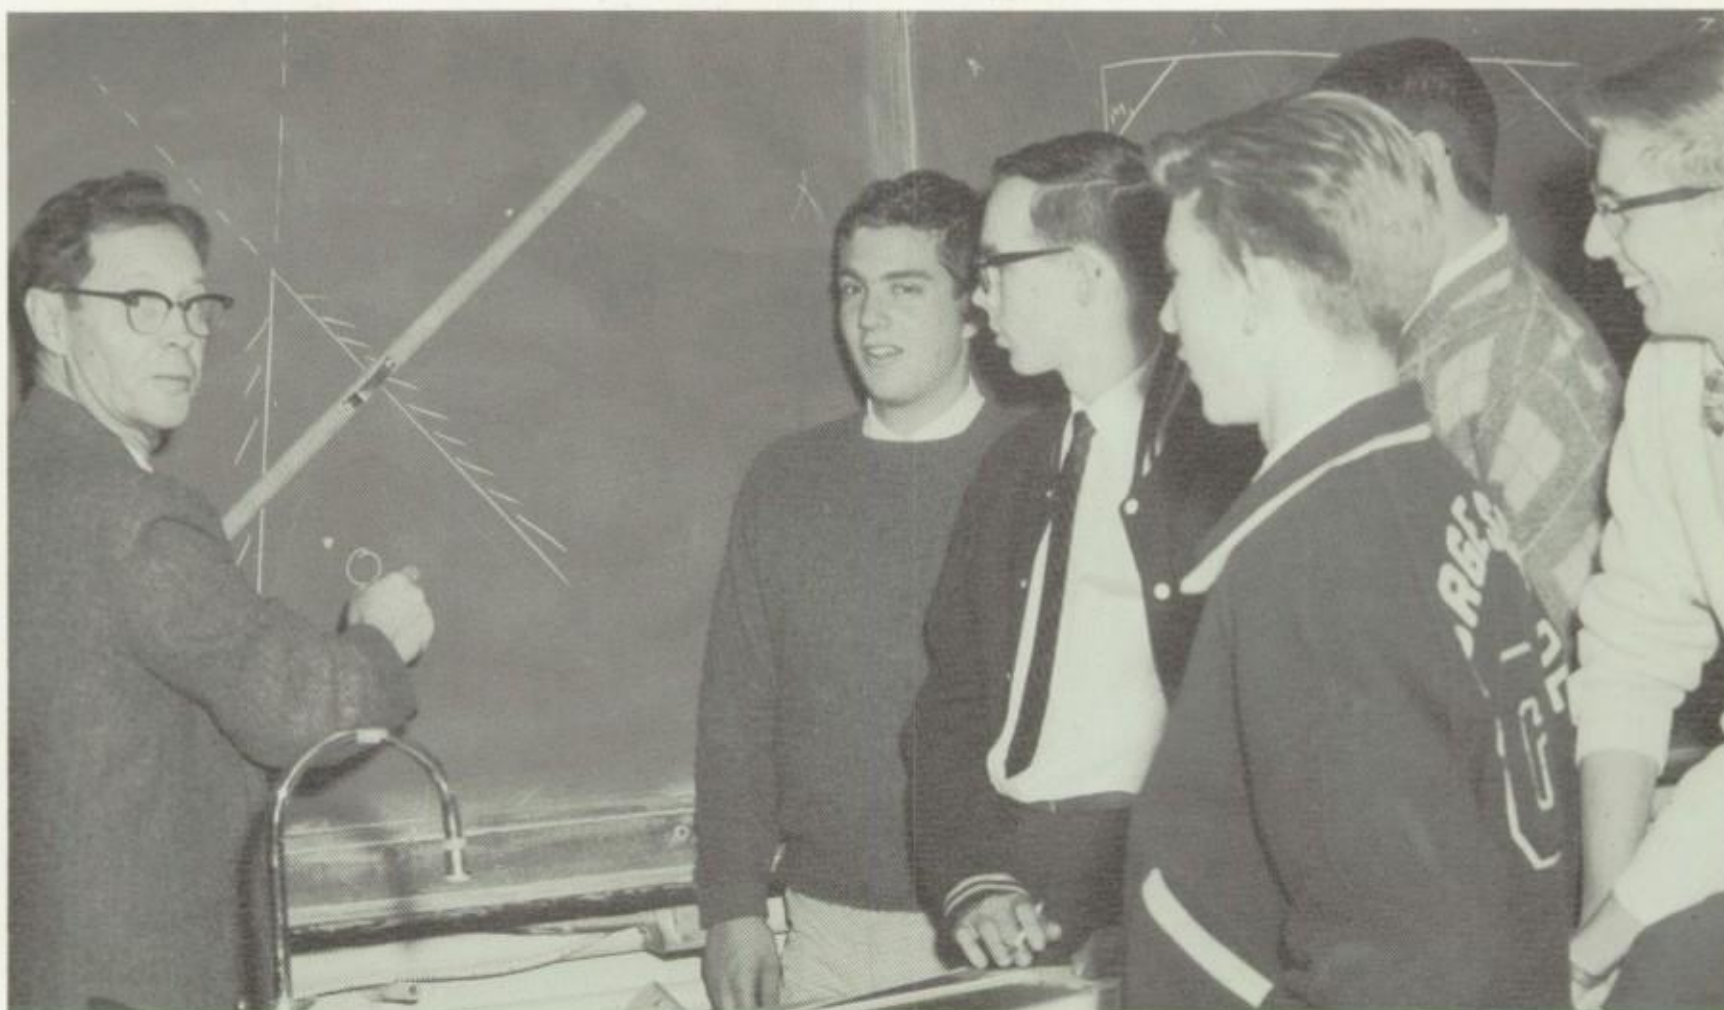

In our science courses we retrace the paths of Man's advancing knowledge of himself and his environment. Through the mirror of our laboratory work, we begin to understand physical phenomena and are inspired by views of frontiers still to be explored. Chemistry students supplement their class work by reproducing famous experiments or by originating their own in the fire and brimstone atmosphere of Retford. Anatomy takes on real dimension for Biology students, who carefully observe both the chemical and biological aspects of 'ranae' and other cooperative inhabitants of formaldehyde jars. Physics students, hypnotized by waves and ripple tanks, burn late lights finishing their experiments. Thus the student emerges: almost smoked, almost pickled, almost dizzy, but well equipped with knowledge.

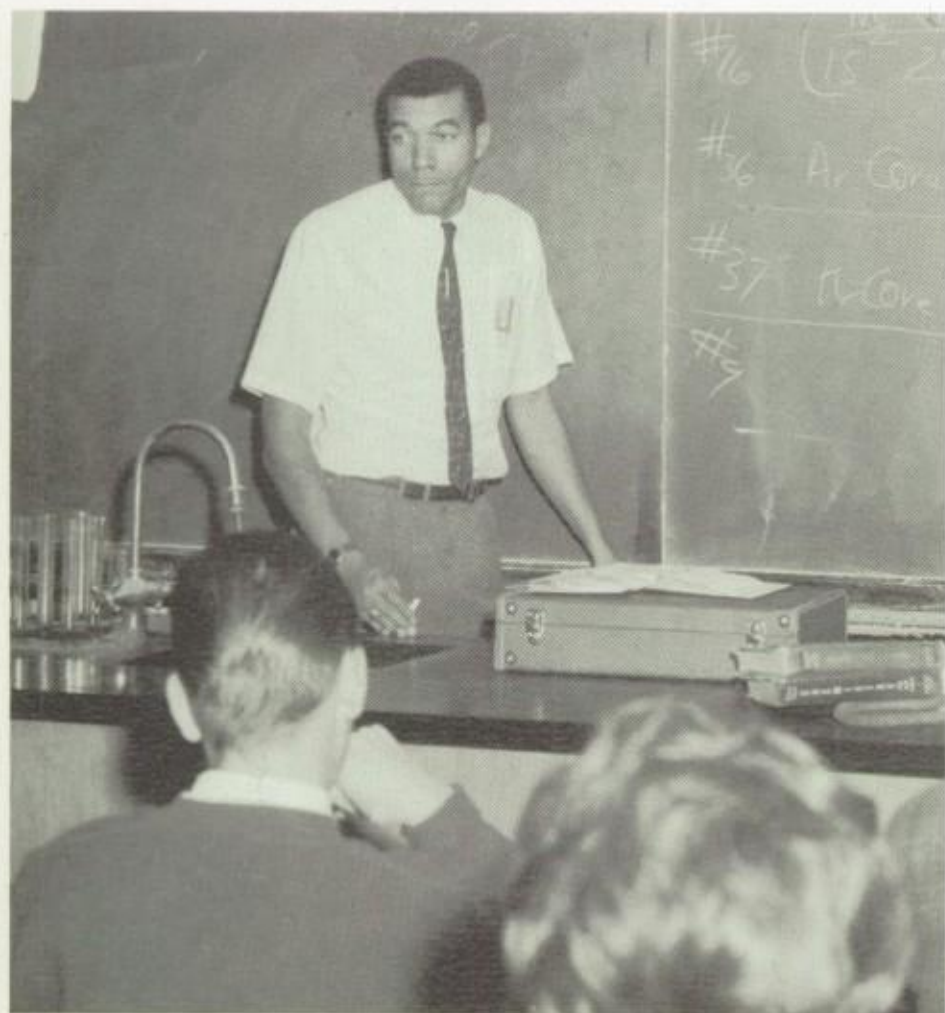

"And the units of this will be who?"

"You see! It really isn't that hard."

"O.K. All you Rinky-Dinks!"

Draw only what you see!

ENGLISH

Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man.

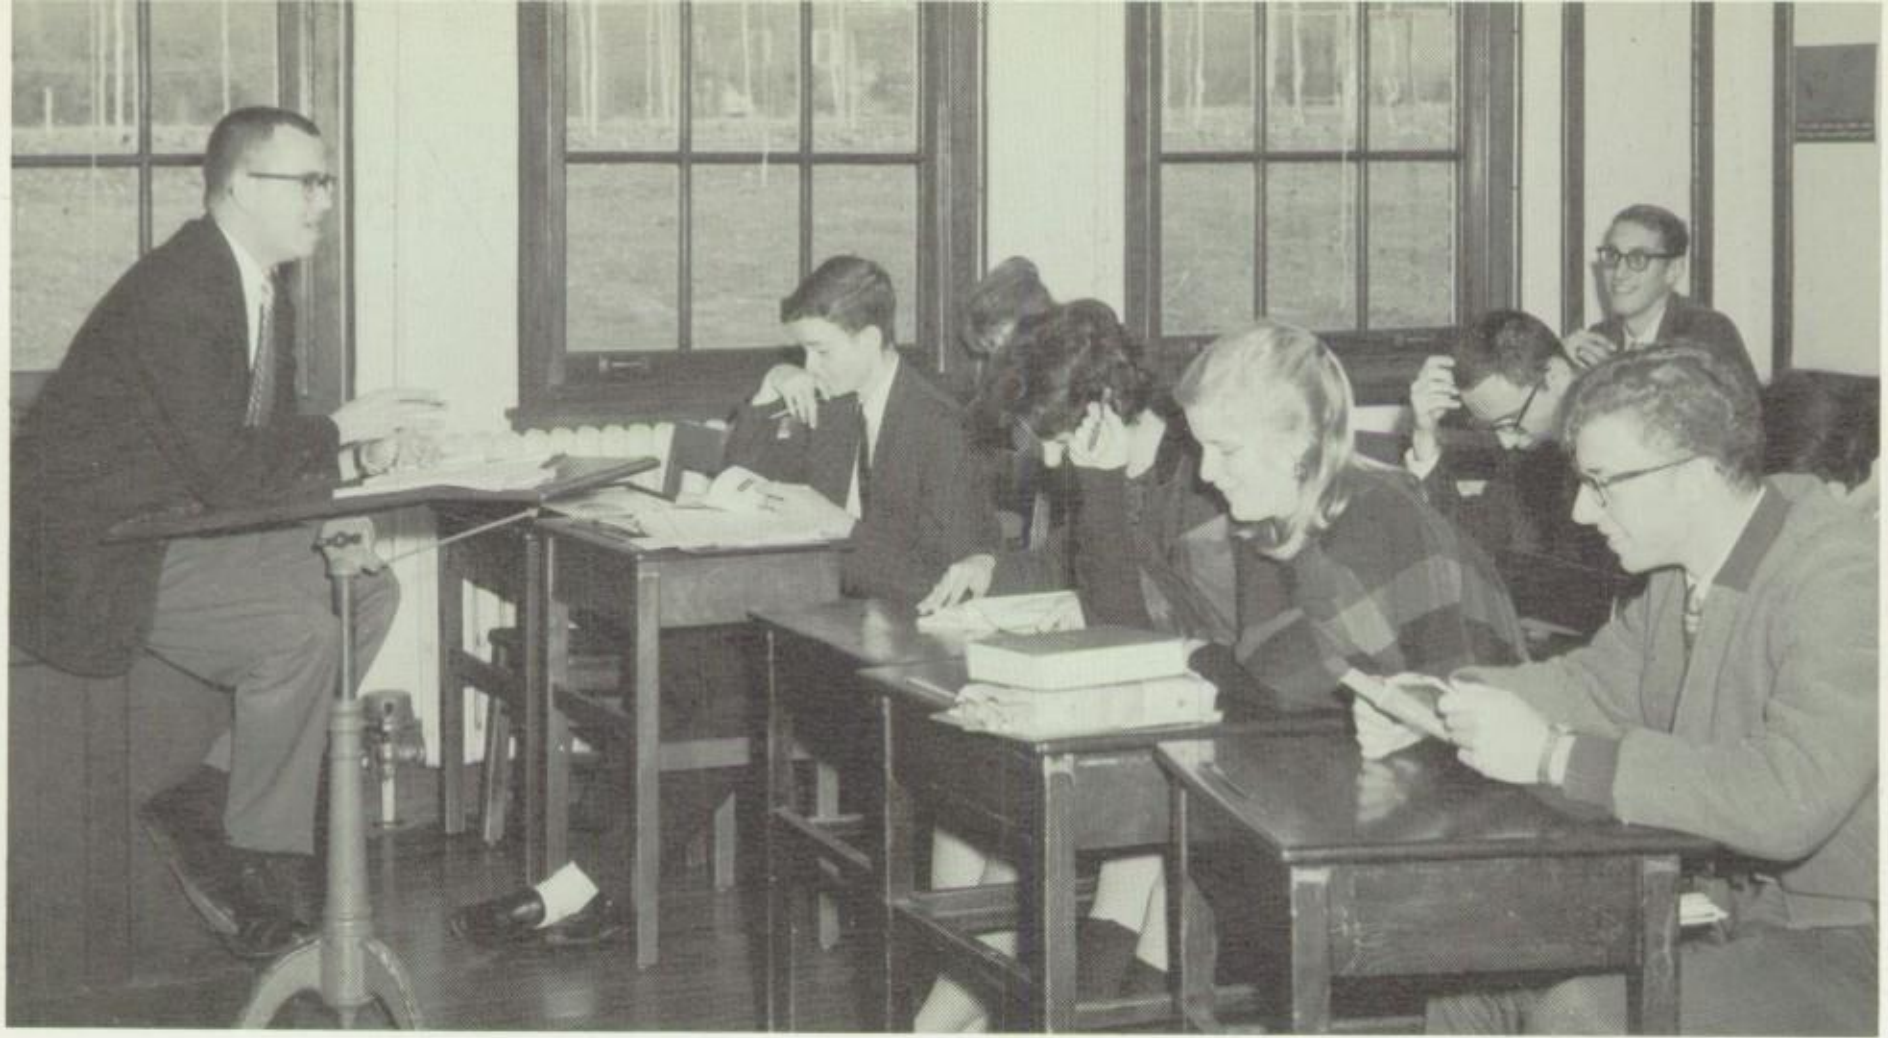

Francis Bacon
"Of Studies"

Reading allows us to share the insights and attitudes of the past. Through discussion and analysis we gain particular understanding of the works studied in class, for group examination allows us to share our knowledge and ideas. This literary experience, supplemented by the familiar form-and-sense studies of Hayakawa, Perrine, and Roberts, gives us a strong foundation from which we may stretch forth in our own creativity and self expression.

LANGUAGES

Visitors to George School are often astounded to hear students avidly babbling in French or German or popping up with exclamations of "Mon Dieu!" or "Sehr Gut!" in the middle of an English conversation. Having struggled and strained to "think" French, or Russian, or German, or even Latin, we suddenly find a whole new realm of study and expression open to us. In classes, we gain the fluency which allows us to study and discuss the literature, history, and culture of countries in their native languages. Occasional trips to foreign movies and plays give us audio-visual contact with language and literature. Thus, through interest and knowledge, we gain understanding of and appreciation for other countries and cultures.

*Meilleure note!

"Your lack of knowledge of German is incredible."

HISTORY

Without the study of history, the Hohenzollerns might be to us just a funny-sounding name, XYZ the last three letters of the alphabet, and the Boxer Rebellion a riot at Madison Square Garden. But as our knowledge expands, these once meaningless words gain significance. From the vantage point of the present we can see the inter-relationships of events and trends, of people and periods, of facts and ideals, of causes and effects. It is through knowledge of the past, plus personal experience, that we are forming ourselves and shaping the world of today and tomorrow.

RELIGION

As a Friends' institution, George School has oriented its religious program to the fundamental Quaker belief that religion should be a combined individual and group experience. Semi-weekly Meetings allow time for silent worship, reflection and contemplation, yet provide a congregated religious atmosphere. Resident and outside speakers accent this program by stimulating intellectual, spiritual . . . or emotional . . . reaction.

Religion courses follow an historical/literary pattern. We study the Bible, the Quaker and other religious movements. Independent study augments the prescribed course and allows seniors to delve deeply into the fields of special interest or concern. Out of this broad background we may hope to shape our own religious philosophies.

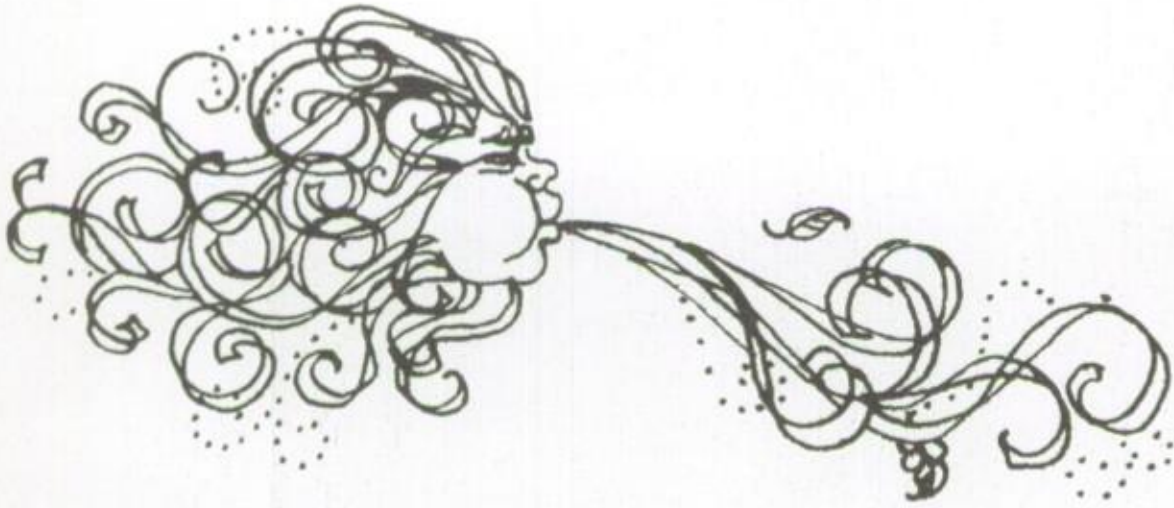

"What kind of dreams do YOU girls have?"

"Now here is Allport's definition of a mature religious sentiment."

SENIORS

George School has been, for us, a stage, and we students merely players. We have had our entrances and our exits, and one individual, in his time, has played many parts, his acts being four years. First the Freshman, unsure and wide-eyed, stepping hesitantly into new experience. Next the Sophomore, the "wise fool" seeking sophistication, yet clinging to childishness. Then the Junior, the lower upper-classman, gaining recognition and yet only beginning to recognize himself. The fourth act shifts to the Senior: wise, yet often imprudent; learned, yet seeking more knowledge; identified, yet searching for self-identity.

Time alone will disclose the acts yet to be played in our lives. As the school year ends each of us stands poised upon a point of time. This point is unique, for from it, for a single moment, we may bend backward with our memories or stretch forward with our expectations.
